

MISS YOUNGER SPEAKS OF STRUGGLE FOR FRANCHISE

Large Audience Attends a Non-Partisan Mass Meeting and Hears Convincing Arguments

A liberal education in the art and science of lobbying was provided without money and without price at the public meeting held last evening in the Alhambra under the auspices of the National Woman's party. That this party is not an individual, separate, distinct organization, in competition and rivalry with any other political corporation, was evidenced by the fact that on either side of the chairman, Mrs. Hugh H. Brown, sat a Socialist and a Republican, formerly a Progressive. There was no Democrat on the stage, an incident that was commented on later in the evening by one of the speakers. The purpose of the meeting was to elect no one, for no name was mentioned, either that of the Socialist, Republican or Prohibition candidate for president. As was stated later by Miss Maud Younger, the principal speaker of the evening, the National Woman's party was organized for one purpose and one purpose only, that of the emancipation of women by enacting the Susan B. Anthony amendment, which is similar to the amendment enfranchising the negroes who were erstwhile slaves and making verity of the immortal sentence in the Declaration of Independence that all (men) are born free and equal.

There was a goodly crowd in the theater when the meeting began, which was materially augmented when the Butler closed. Mrs. Brown officiated as chairman in most competent manner. She briefly spoke of the purpose of the meeting and then introduced Altha Ritchie, a prominent young man in the local Socialist union and a strong worker for the cause of his party and for woman's emancipation. In his address he arraigned the Democratic party for its stand on suffrage and did not have much pleasant things to say of the Republicans in the past. He told of the inconsistencies of President Wilson and read extracts from the Socialist platform.

Mrs. Brown introduced Judge Mark R. Averill, who told of the leaven that had come into the lump of the Republican party through the formation of the Progressive party, which was heart and soul for suffrage, and its return to the Republican fold, pointing out that the Progressives in the election of four years ago polled a heavier vote than the Republicans, hence their ability to emphasize the necessity of the Republicans standing for the principles enunciated by the National Woman's party. He scored the "chivalrous" south for its opposition to the Susan B. Anthony amendment. The speaker deplored the fact that a small proportion of the women of the country were injuring the cause of their sex by opposing suffrage for political reasons.

Miss Maud Younger, a most remarkable woman by the way, it being learned through Mrs. Brown's introduction, then was received by the and 186 of WORLD'S WORK for June, 1916, where you will learn that mere good old-fashioned American business has been all that was needed in dealing with that nation on a number of occasions.

Is it not possible for you to understand that while the present European conflict is under way, this nation can have no actual war with Germany because of the "iron ring" that surrounds that country and its allies, and which is getting tighter every day? We cannot get near Germany or Germany near us until that war is ended when Germany, now like the insolent dog within the fence, will be much less truculent.

As to Mexico, we are now at war with that country in the matter of expense, hardship, and even occasional fighting. We have more soldiers on the border than it took once to conquer Mexico, and the invasion of that country has actually begun in the form of the "iron ring" that surrounds that country and its allies, and which is getting tighter every day? We cannot get near Germany or Germany near us until that war is ended when Germany, now like the insolent dog within the fence, will be much less truculent.

On this point, that of war, we stand ready to show the utter inconsistency of Wilson's attitude with reference to Mexico, Germany and Japan. In your sixth paragraph you seem to condemn "Tammany practice." We wonder why, because your hero, Wilson, is strenuously seeking Tammany's support, practice and all, at the present moment.

Your seventh paragraph says: "If the Woman's vote shows conservative dignity and strength, they'll get the vote from their own states, where it is more credit to them." We confess we are at a loss here to understand you.

"If the Woman's vote shows," they'll get the vote from their own states." How can they get the vote where they have it, and how can they vote show anything where they have it not? And which are their own states? Is the conservatism you speak of that failure to assert themselves and demand their rights that has marked womanhood for untold centuries? Is there any dignity in servility?

Right here we ask you if you are a Democrat because your father was or your husband is? If so, what dignity or strength are you exhibiting? If you are a Democrat because you have deliberately and thoughtfully adopted that party's principles, will you kindly tell us in plain English which of those principles appeal to you? We are without a party of the usual kind, and wish to meet freely informed in order to choose one safely.

You close by criticizing Hughes for vetoing the Teachers' Pension Bill when he was Governor of New York. Do you know the exact facts concerning that veto? Many vetoes are the result of the advice of Attorney Generals upon the Constitutionality of Acts or legal defects in them. A pension bill may easily get over the line.

But, suppose he did and thereby committed a grave error, what human being has not? And how does this compare with Wilson's eight changes of mind about the embargo on munitions, cannon and military supplies at the Mexican border, four of which decisions must have been wrong if the other four were right, because direct opposites?

And how does it compare with Wilson's selection of cabinet officers, Bryan, a self-confessed failure as Secretary of State; Lansing, who has proved himself to be merely a juggler with words in his numerous notes; Daniels, celebrated Naval clown; Burleson, exploiter of convict labor, etc? What greater menace can there be to this country's welfare than a political trickster at the head of its affairs, vacillating, uncertain, unsteady and surrounded by incompetent advisers? As you have talked only of what Mr. Wilson has done, we are pointing out what we see that he has not done.

In conclusion, we respectfully request that if you attempt to answer our numerous questions, you give your authority for your facts. Mere assertions are not argument. We are ready with our facts.

Yours very truly,
(Mrs.) MABEL DAVIS,
Chairman, Tonopah Branch,
National Woman's Party.
